The following rules apply to the temporary home that you are about to enter. The temporary home is a place for you to think about yourself with the help of your oldcomer. Time should be spent in the writing of a moral inventory which is another tool to help you get to know yourself. Your oldcomer is responsible for you, but the parents are in charge of the household. This should be remembered.

You should be aware of other standards for the temporary home. There are assurances of (1) fire safety, (2) sanitary conditions, (3) adequate provisions of food, (4) adequate sleeping accommodations and (5) contact with the oldcomer's family.
