The controversial Growing Together drug treatment center for teens has been granted a full state operating license after answering concerns prompted by parental complaints.

Cam Freedlund, local spokeswoman for the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, said the full license was granted after the center assured state officials that staffing and other concerns had been alleviated. In July, the center had its license extended to October and was told to hire more staff and end a policy that called for aggressive youngsters to be held down on the floor against their will.
