Politics In The Sunshine

Truthful Politics Only A Dream

HERE AND THERE: Another example of a public official going to work for those he once regulated has cropped up in Tallahassee. Jim Larkin, who oversaw construction of a $10-million project in the capital, quit his job and went to work for the architects who designed and built the structure . . . Miller Newton, a Tampa-based Democrat who tried vainly for the 5th Congressional District nomination last fall, has won a job as town clerk in New Port Richey. Newton and other aspiring politicians are finding the rapid growth of Pasco County a fertile field for political plowing.
