The Orlando Shakespeare Festival begins its annual fund-raising campaign today for the 1991-92 season productions of Romeo and Juliet and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Thirty performances will be presented during the five-week season beginning March 20.

The festival's board of directors has set of goal of $175,000 for Central Florida's only non-profit repertory theater.

This year, busy Shakespeare buffs have a new way to contribute: They can become Corporate Stars. The Corporate Star title allows businesses, with a $5,000 donation, to sponsor one night's performance, receive 50 free tickets for its employees or clients and 100 free tickets for the charity of its choice.

The festival is an affiliate of the University of Central Florida and is supported by state and local grants, along with individual and corporate donations.

For more information about making a contribution to the Orlando Shakespeare Festival, call 423-6905.
